MEDICAL SCHOOL NIH PROPOSAL PREPARATION PROGRAM ("P³")

Applications Due: March 21, 2016

P³ is designed for early-career faculty in the Medical School who are preparing their first K- or R-series NIH grant proposal. It is a small (10-12 faculty), highly interactive, peer grant-writing group that meets 11 times over four months. Each session requires participants to prepare drafts of their proposal sections and critique one another’s written material. Because writing begins immediately, P³ is only suitable for faculty whose project aims and approaches are reasonably well conceptualized and are truly “ready to write.”

To be considered for registration, faculty must meet all of the following criteria:

- Currently preparing to submit an NIH R- or K-series proposal for the October/November NIH deadline;
- Working with a mentor on the proposal; and
- Can commit to completing the full 11-session program

Please fill out the application below - availability for the P³ is extremely limited. At the end of the form you will be prompted to add an abstract of your proposal topic and upload your current NIH biosketch.

For more information please contact the Medical School Office of Faculty Affairs.

Summer 2016 P³ Application

The Medical School P³ is directed by:

- John Grabowski, PhD (Dept. of Psychiatry)
- Clifford Steer, MD (Dept. of Medicine)
- Anne Marie Weber-Main, PhD (Dept. of Medicine)
- Kimberly Thomas-Pollei, PhD (Writing Studies, Adjunct/Dept. of Medicine)