The Path to Publication: A Workshop on Preparing Peer-Reviewed Manuscripts

Audience: Medical School faculty who have minimal to moderate experience in writing for peer-reviewed journals.

- Navigate key steps in the manuscript submission process, from selecting a journal to responding to reviewers.
- Meet readers’ expectations for effective scientific writing both overall, and in the main sections of a research article.
- Apply techniques to maximize productivity as writers.
- Become knowledgeable about the broad range of scholarly projects and article types that can be published (original research, brief reports, reviews, and more).
- Be attentive to ethical issues related to publication. Adopt "in house" (department-level) programs to stimulate new manuscripts.
